Eat Smart Kentucky

Guidelines for Healthy Foods and Beverages at Meetings, Gatherings and Events
Eating is one of life’s greatest pleasures. There are many foods from which to choose, and many ways to build a healthy lifestyle. This leaves a lot of room for choice. The Dietary Guidelines for Americans\(^1\) were designed to help people enjoy a variety of foods while ensuring good health. These guidelines encourage eating a variety of foods and balancing food with physical activity. Having healthy foods and drinks available at events makes sense and supports good health.

Imagine a Kentucky where:

- Children and adults can choose from a variety of tasty foods and drinks at community events, schools, and civic, professional and religious centers. This includes fruits, vegetables, and lower-fat, lower-calorie options. Water is always available to drink.
- Caterers, restaurant owners and other food and drink companies provide healthy foods and drinks in healthy amounts for customers.
- Employees can buy healthy snacks in vending machines at work and can choose healthy foods in meetings and classes.
- Food and beverages are served in smaller portions.
- Healthy foods are offered at potlucks, meetings, health fairs, religious functions and other community events.

The Partnership for a Fit Kentucky is a public/private partnership focused on building healthy nutrition and physical environments. Their mission is to foster healthy weight and fitness in order to prevent chronic diseases among Kentuckians. We need your help to create a Kentucky where people view eating smart and moving more as a normal part of everyday living!

Think healthy eating is boring? Doesn’t taste good? Costs more? Think again! Try colorful fruits and vegetables, tasty whole grain breads and pastas seasoned with delicious herbs and spices. You can eat and serve these tasty foods without blowing your budget. “Eating Smart” does not mean every single food you eat (or serve) has to be low in fat or high in fiber. It does mean balancing less-healthy foods and drinks with healthier ones. It also means serving food portions that support good nutrition without too many calories.

EAT SMART KENTUCKY: Guidelines for Healthy Foods and Beverages at Meetings, Gatherings, and Events is a tool for anyone who is in charge of food-related events. Making simple changes to foods and drinks you offer at group and community events gives Kentuckians disease-fighting foods and the energy boost they may need without worrying about too many calories or too much unhealthy fat.

Why Should We Be Worried?

Sixty-three percent of Kentuckians are obese or overweight.\(^2\) Our food choices, lifestyle and surroundings all affect our health. We know that choosing the right foods can prevent diseases and help us live better lives. Most Kentuckians’ diets are low in fruits, vegetables and whole grains and are high in fat, saturated fat and sugars. Eating a steady diet of unhealthy foods and drinks is associated with four of the 10 leading causes of death: heart disease, some types of cancer, stroke and type 2 diabetes. Health problems related to poor nutrition and physical inactivity cost Kentuckians about $1.2 billion each year in medical care costs.³,⁴

Health experts are seeing growing numbers of people at an unhealthy weight in our state. The following guidelines will help meeting planners choose lower-fat, lower-calorie foods and drinks for events. As users of this guide, we can model our commitment to good health by making our meetings and events healthier and sharing that vision with others across our state. Most importantly, by following these guidelines, you can improve your own health and the quality of your life. You may also reduce your risk for long-term diseases such as heart disease, cancer and diabetes. So think about all the food-related events you are involved in (meetings, trainings, church suppers, fundraisers, luncheons, receptions, etc.) and promote good health by using some of the suggestions listed in this guide.

Eat Smart Kentucky: Guidelines for Healthy Foods and Beverages at Meetings, Gatherings, and Events was printed with permission from Eat Smart, Move More... North Carolina, N.C. Division of Public Health—Physical Activity and Nutrition Branch. It was adapted from Guidelines for Offering Healthy Foods at Meetings, Seminars and Catered Events developed by the School of Public Health, University of Minnesota, 2003.

FIVE GUIDELINES

GUIDELINE 1

Offer healthy food choices at breakfasts, lunches, dinners, pot lucks and receptions.

There are many healthy and tasty options for foods and beverages. Fruits and vegetables are low in calories and high in vitamins, minerals and fiber. Portion sizes are important, too. Portion sizes have grown over the years. Larger helpings of high-calorie, high-fat foods contribute to overweight in adults and children. These “red flag” foods are “empty calories” with few nutrients. Offer smaller portions of these foods and beverages. Try to offer no more than two red flag foods at a party or event. Foods meeting this criteria are marked by a ⬠ throughout this booklet. Offer lower-calorie beverages — water, low-fat milk and unsweetened teas. Offer baked, roasted or grilled meats and fish, served with vegetables prepared without added fat.

GUIDELINE 2

Offer only healthy foods at mid-morning or mid-afternoon meeting breaks.

Food is everywhere we go, all day, every day. Mid-morning and mid-afternoon meeting breaks often involve eating food. With many of us struggling to control our weight in our food-filled surroundings, it’s good to think twice about whether it’s necessary to offer food at meetings, presentations and seminars, especially mid-morning and mid-afternoon. Help create a norm that food does not have to be everywhere. Food does not have to be the way we get people to attend. If you do provide food, offer only fruits, vegetables or other healthy foods. Or, offer a physical activity break instead. Turn on some music and get people to dance or move around. Serve water at these events.

GUIDELINE 3

Identify and promote healthier food and beverage providers.

Healthy food and beverage options for meetings, gatherings and events can be purchased in many places: restaurants, grocery stores, farmer’s markets, caterers and food distributors, just to name a few. Once you have identified the businesses that are willing to provide high quality, healthier foods at a reasonable price, compile and share that information with others in your community. For example, if you have worked with a caterer who has been willing to alter menu offerings or adjust recipes to decrease fat or increase fruit options, share that caterer’s name with others. Promoting these businesses with friends and colleagues not only helps the business grow, but it sends a message into the community that healthy foods and beverages are a priority. In turn, this may mean that vendors begin to carry more items and are able to provide them at a lower cost. It’s a win-win situation.
Foods that are safe from harmful bacteria and viruses are vital for healthy eating. From farm to table, everyone shares the responsibility of keeping food as safe as possible by washing hands and surfaces often; separating raw, cooked and ready-to-eat foods while shopping, preparing and storing; cooking and chilling foods to a safe temperature; and serving foods safely.

Hot foods should be kept hot (140°F or above) and cold food at 45°F or below. Foods can be left at room temperature for a maximum of two hours. Call the Lexington-Fayette County Health Department Environmental Division at (859) 231-9791 to provide you with more suggestions.

Guideline 4

Keep food safe to eat.

Guideline 5

Lead by example.

When group leaders role-model healthy eating and physical activity, it makes a powerful statement. Show your members or employees that you are concerned about their health and well-being.

- Sign a formal or informal Eat Smart Kentucky Healthy Foods policy (see page 11.)
- Share this document with other leaders in your community.
- Challenge them to lead by example. Buy healthy foods when you dine out.
- Prepare and eat healthy meals at home.
- Do not forget to build physical activity into your events as well.
- Encourage physical activity in your organization and “walk the talk” yourself.
